Beth Kennedy is a mixed media painter based in the leafy suburbs of Brisbane. Her work is rooted in storytelling, with each painting evolving slowly through layered washes, organic forms, and rhythmic patterns. At the heart of Beth's practice is a fascination with the dynamics of pattern, creating works that, even at their most vibrant, carry a quiet, enigmatic beauty. With a playful and intuitive approach, Beth embraces the unexpected welcoming the "happy accidents" that arise from experimenting with spray paint, oil stick, gouache, ink, and watercolour.

Pink and pale blue coloured sunset clouds when I'm travelling and looking over the ocean or out of a plane window...everyday clouds as I'm going about my usual routine, and the things-are-difficult-now clouds as they gather grey above my head. This collection of paintings is about stopping and engaging in all of these moments, in all of their colours.
